A PUBLIC READING OF JOHN MILTON'S "PARADISE LOST"
 Shu-Box Theatre, Riddell Centre Info: 585-4299
 In what is becoming a U of R tradition, the Department of English again presents a day-long reading of John Milton's epic poem, "Paradise Lost."
 The event was organized by professor of English Jeanne Shami, who teaches a course on Milton every two years.
 "Each of the 12 books starts on the hour, and each hour begins with what Milton called an Argument, which gives a summary of what the book is about, and who is speaking," Shami explains. "No matter what time of day you drop in, you have an idea where you are in the poem." While some people do stay for a short while, a surprising number get hooked and stay for the remainder of the day. That happened to Lieutenant-Governor Linda Haverstock four years ago. Her Remembrance Day schedule prohibits her from reading again this time, but she expects to be back for the next one. One reader who will return is Dr. David Barnard, former president of the U of R, who will be the Narrator.
 "The Narrator is in 11 of the 12 books, so it takes both stamina and commitment to read this part. I'm delighted that Dr. Barnard will do it," says Shami. "Hearing Paradise Lost read aloud is the only way to really understand the poem. This is an opportunity for students and the general public to enjoy one of the great works of English literature."

U of R Alumni Association unveils new awards program

The University and its Alumni Association has launched a new and expanded lineup of alumni awards. The awards will be unveiled at the Alumni Crowning Achievement Awards celebration on November 14 at 7:30 p.m. at the University Theatre.

The new program increases the number of awards to five and honours U of R grads who have achieved exceptional success in different areas.

Receiving the Lifetime Achievement Award will be Dr. George Anderson, who graduated with a master of arts degree in 1975. Among his many accomplishments, Anderson helped found the Saskatchewan Housing Corporation and, as head of the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, established a national housing program for families with modest incomes. Anderson says his U of R experience, "increased my intellectual scope and gave me a keen appreciation for the economic, political and social development of Saskatchewan."

Regina educator Ben Grebinski will receive the Distinguished Alumni Award in the Professional/Business category. He received his bachelor of education degree from the U of R in 1979 and his master of education in 1981. He is currently a superintendent for Regina Catholic Schools. Grebinski has also lectured in the Faculty of Education and the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research at the U of R.

The Alumni Award for Humanitarian/Community Service will be presented to Roxane Schury for her work in the interests of children. She earned her first degree from the Saskatchewan Indian Federated College (SIFC) in 1981 and a bachelor of social work degree in 1997, while working full-time. She now works for the Saskatchewan Children's Advocate Office. "Attending SIFC remains one of the best personal and professional choices I have made," Schury says.

Hiedi Pearson will receive the Alumni Service Award for her volunteer leadership. Pearson worked for the U of R's Development Office for five years after graduating, and continued her volunteer work after she left.

"It was in 1993, my first real job after convocating, that my passion for the U of R really began to grow. I am proud of the time I spent on the Alumni Association Board of Directors, and most proud of our work developing active alumni branches across the country," says Pearson.

Pamela Lynn Ait-Allaoua will receive the young Alumni Award for her involvement in the community, and in recognition of her success in creating Tot's Cafe, a combination children's play centre, restaurant, childcare service and delivery point for family programs. "The things I learned at the U of R - self-discipline, hard work and a sense of achievement - have contributed in a significant way to my success today," says Ait-Allaoua.

In addition to the presentation of the awards, the celebration will feature an exciting evening of musical and artistic performances by some of the U of R's most talented students and an A-list of vocalists and musicians, many of whom are U of R graduates. Among the evening entertainers are vocalist Lynn Channing, trumpeter Brent Ghiglione and pianist David MacIntyre. The master of ceremonies for the event is David Leyshon a U of R theatre graduate and a member of the prestigious Shaw Festival Theatre acting ensemble.

Tickets for the awards celebration are $25 ($10 for students) and include a champagne reception following the presentations. Call 585-4503 for more information, or check out the Alumni Association's new website at www.uregina.ca/alumni

Besides teaching courses in the U of R's women's studies program, Patricia Miller-Schroeder has found the time to write children's books and the script for an animated video. She's also written scripts for programs aired on Discovery Channel, SCN and the Women's Television Network. "I have to do it in spurts," she says.

For Miller-Schroeder, her books and scripts complement her work in the classroom. Her background in science allows her to explore areas that have often been neglected, simply because science is an area where traditionally, fewer women have been involved. However, in her course "Women, the Environment and Change" Miller-Schroeder points out that women around the world are involved in environmental movements, especially in developing countries. Most of the 17 children's books she has written contain environmental themes. The books are used in schools, and two of them have been nominated for Saskatchewan Book Awards. While it's mostly women who take the courses Miller-Schroeder teaches, there is a good cross-section of students from all areas of the University, she says. There's always a waiting list for the introductory courses, she adds. "I've learned from my students that women are very creative and innovative in addressing issues that concern them," Miller-Schroeder says. "The projects students choose to do in the courses are a good way for all of us to learn from each other."
