INDG 285AA-ZZ

3-6:6-0

Institute in Indigenous Studies

This course is an intensive study about specific topics to be designation with each offering and made available to interested groups or individuals.

 Prerequisite: INDG 100 or permission of the Department Head. ***

Rationale

The department is convinced of the need for delivery of topically informed institutes for various targeted groups of professionals, as well as interested individuals. One example of this would be a topical institute titled “Cultural and Historical Contexts for Teaching Treaties.” This would be of interested to teachers who have recently been required to add this content into their classroom curriculum.

Rationale

The intention has always been to require that Anthropology majors take 3 regional ethnographic area courses. Some non-ethnographic area courses have been inadvertently added to the eligible options. This corrects that.

MOTION to revise the description of ANTH 406.

ANTH 406 3:3-0
European Cultures After Socialism

This course explores ongoing economic and sociocultural ~~and economic~~ transformations in Eastern Europe after the demise of Ceommunist Party rule. Using Utilizing recent ethnographic accounts and documentary films, this course discusses postsocialist markets, consumption, gender, politics, popular culture, as well as changes in social identity and morality. ~~will examine such topics as postsocialist markets, consumption, political practices, popular culture, and changes in identity.~~

 Prerequisite: Any two 200-level courses from ANTH, HIST, PHIL, SOC, PSCI or WGST, at least one of which is to be selected from ANTH 203 or ANTH 230- 239, or permission of the department head. ***

Rationale

These changes bring the course descriptions up-to-date and better align with how they're delivered.
